Dear Pinal County Town Hall Delegates:

The 25th Pinal County Town Hall, Workforce NextGen: Cultivating Success in Pinal County was a memorable experience. The topic was not only a timely issue, but of vital importance with the clear need for a trained Pinal County Workforce. Town Hall contained a wealth of information from our presenters, spawned lively discussions, and provided an opportunity for delegates to develop new networks and friendly relationships.

This report serves not only as documentation of our delegates' hard work and collaborative spirit, but a guide to assist you in taking the next step-the implementation of these strategies. Take time to share this report with friends and family, co-workers, members of your local volunteer and civic groups, or others that can help implement these strategies in your neighborhoods and communities.

Included in this report is a Delegate Directory. Use this directory to stay in contact with fellow delegates. Ask what they are doing to expand their networks and build upon each other's experiences. Share ideas and thoughts. Use the network you developed during Town Hall to assist you in spreading the word of the accomplishments achieved during Pinal County Town Hall.

Thank you for your participation in the 25th Pinal County Town Hall. We are grateful for the support from our Partners in Economic Progress and our Pinal County Board of Supervisors. Without their support, Town Hall could not achieve its mission.

We are also delighted by the support and representation from our Pinal County Schools with the leaders of tomorrow in attendance. These youth truly are our future. Their participation in all aspects of the Town Hall leaves us with the knowledge that Pinal County will be in good hands when they take over.

We look forward to seeing you for the 26th Pinal County Town Hall. In the meantime, if you have questions or need more information, please feel free to contact Pinal County Town Hall at 480-322-1626, or by email at m.leather@mchsi.com.

ARIZONA

Dennis Hoffman from the W. P. Carey School of Business at Arizona State University presented an overview of the role of workforce development in our state economic development picture. He described state, regional and community effort in economic development, especially in an effort to strengthen our base industries of tourism, high-tech manufacturing and wholesale trade. Agriculture, mining and government are economic drivers outside of the metro areas. There are several factors that influence base industry migration including quality and depth of workforce. In order to compete on a national level, Arizona will need to provide a deeper pool of skilled educated workers; sufficient capital to fund research and expansion by entrepreneurs; and an informed and committed state-level leadership.

Dr. Hoffman compared the Phoenix metropolitan area to several other comparable cities in the Southwest. He also showed graphs that identified growing occupations and percentage of job openings by educational attainment.

Will our youth decide to stay in school knowing education will open the door to jobs of the future?

PINAL COUNTY PANEL PRESENTATION

Al Larson, Director of Regional Development and interim Executive Director of Central Arizona Government gave a briefing on the workforce in Pinal County. The top industries in the region are:

Employment by Industry in Pinal County

Industry	Empl.	Industry	Empl.
Retail Trade	13,681	Other Private Services	5,067
Health and Social Services	12,224	Transportation/Warehousing	4,898
Manufacturing	11,818	Finance and Insurance	4,885
Construction	11,326	Professional and Technical	4,424
Education	9,172	Administrative Services	4,166
Government	9,055	Wholesale Trade	3,236
Hospitality and Food Service	6,751	Agriculture	3,049

Mr. Larson discussed that with the unemployment rate down in the county, we should not assume the economy is better. A better indication of workforce health is the labor force participation rate as it compares the number of people working against the total population that are of working age.

A skilled workforce is important to companies looking to relocate. Skill shortages limit economic growth in our region. Pinal County levels exceed Arizona and the U.S. in High School diplomas but lag behind in population attaining a bachelor's degree. 53% of the Pinal County workforce commutes from the county and only 46.5 percent stay and work within Pinal County.

Other areas that Pinal County residents need to focus on to change our skill shortage is:

- Many of our unemployed cannot pass a drug test or make it through a background check
- Our workforce does not have sufficient technical skills
- Soft skills are also needed for us to be competitive (professionalism, teamwork and collaboration, effective communication and critical thinking).

Casa Grande Mayor, Bob Jackson, also participated in the panel discussion. Mayor Jackson gave an economic update and also spoke about Phoenix Mart, the largest trading center in North America. Phoenix Mart will be comprised of foreign and domestic investors, with an emphasis on those from China.

Jack Beverage of Empowerment Systems in Apache Junction was the third participant of the panel. Mr. Beverage discussed the high growth opportunities that are available in the healthcare industry.

ARIZONA WORKFORCE POLICY

Sherman Jennings from Boeing is the Chair of the Governor's Council on Workforce Policy. Mr. Jennings gave Town Hall participants an overview of how the Council affects changes in workforce policy. Besides overseeing compliance and programs funded through the Workforce Investment Act, committees are established to influence how these funds are used in education, return on investment and sector strategy.

A 5-Year Integrated Workforce Plan has been established which focuses on:

- Individuals and businesses as customers
- Committing resources to functional alignment
- Uniform Service Delivery
- Workforce development must partner with economic development

Top 10 Reasons to Hire a Vet

Themes that recurred in the presentations and discussions at the Pinal County Town Hall point to several next steps that could be considered for Workforce Development in Pinal County:

1. More people need to know about the resources and services available. Many participants commented that they did not know many of the services exist. Workforce Connections One Stop partners were asked to continue providing information at the community level. Representatives of the One Stop have formed a Business Services Team to be more responsive to local business needs. Representatives are also providing outreach to local chambers and community members.
2. Workforce Connections resources and services are available at the One Stop in Casa Grande but they are being made available county wide. Representatives from the Arizona Workforce Connections One Stop described the concept of Access Points and are recruiting partnerships in communities. Participants of the Pinal County Town Hall volunteered locations that could be used that can host a computer so that job seekers have access to services that are available.
3. There are many services available to help homeless veterans but they are hard to identify. Pinal County Town Hall participants were asked to let community agencies know that there are agencies at the One Stop that can connect our homeless veterans to services if they can help us locate the vets. Identifying homeless veterans also help agencies ask for more funding in our region.
4. Businesses are identifying soft skill shortages in those looking for work. Training should be focused on some of these Soft skills such as professionalism, teamwork and collaboration, effective communication and critical thinking. Soft Skill training should be incorporated into K-12 and postsecondary education.
5. We must continue to integrate Workforce Development, economic development and education. There are many resources available to assist our residents look for work and to advance their education and skills through training. Workforce developers, colleges and school districts should engage directly with economic developers to ensure that the skills we are training for are the skillsets that are necessary to produce a vibrant economy.
6. Continue to Work Together – locally with regional organizations and with statewide workforce development agencies. One of the strongest themes throughout the presentations again this year is cooperating and working together. There are many workforce development initiatives at the One Stop and throughout the County. In times of limited funds, all of these partners need to work together to leverage additional opportunities.

Questions that were posed to Pinal County Town Hall:

- Can Pinal County learn from what is happening in Tucson and Phoenix?
- How can Pinal County better network in Arizona and in the Southwest?

One way to learn from our neighboring counties that have seen population growth well before Pinal County has started to grow is to partner with these entities through efforts such as Pinal Partnership, Joint Planning Advisory Council and the Sun Corridor.

How can Workforce Development and Economic Development be better aligned?
 How can our workforce better be better prepared as it comes to technical skills and soft skills? What can we do for those who cannot pass a drug test or background screening? How can we make a difference on our next generation of workers?

Students have been active participants in our Town Hall for many years. Besides participating in general session presentations and discussion, students have their own break-out sessions to are added to relate workforce development to a student that is preparing for the world of work.
